REACTIONS

. . . . of Growth

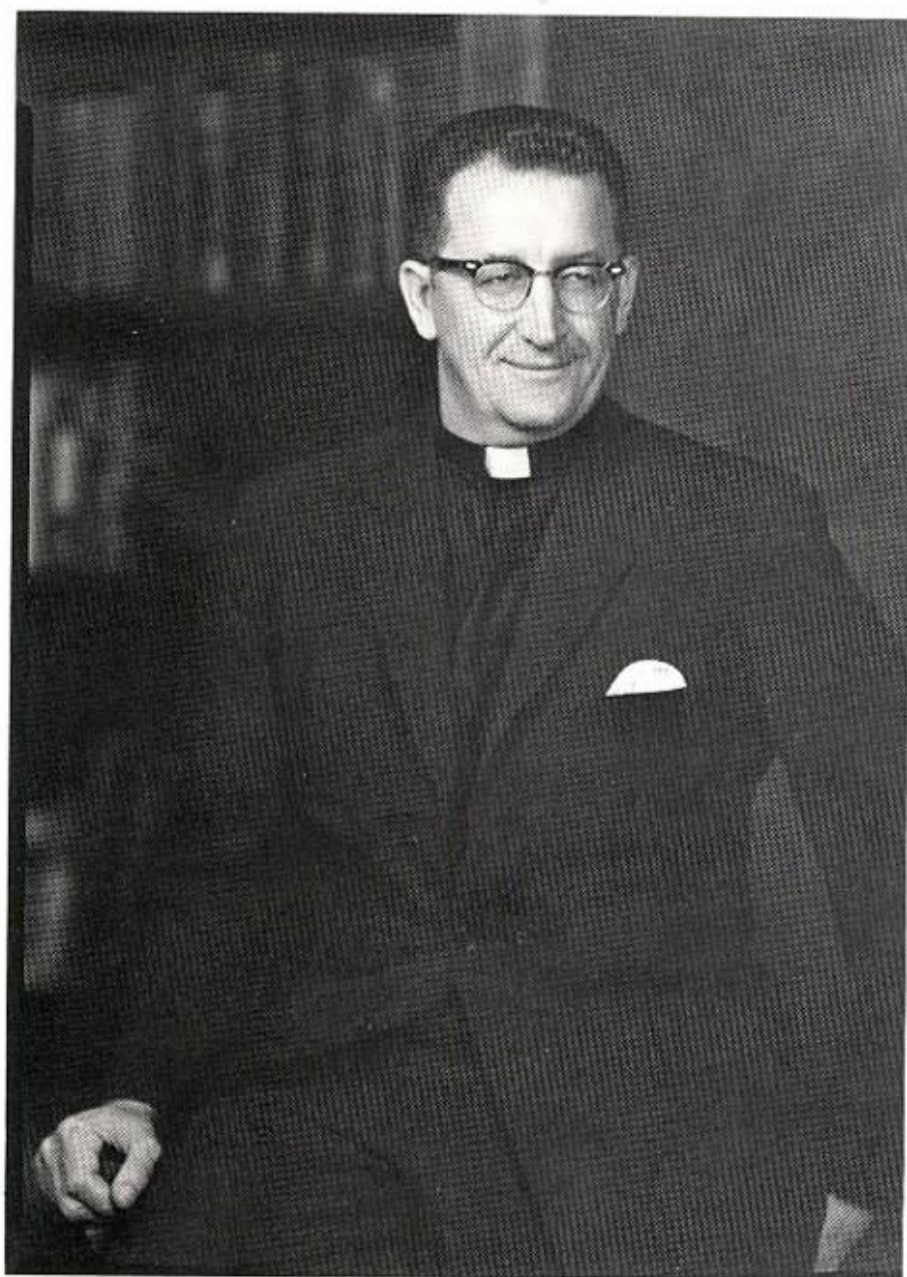

GROWING TOWARDS TOMORROW

Autumn began, carrying with it certain symptoms of a "fall fever," sadness that the summer was over, dread of the bitter winter tomorrows ahead. But with the fall fever was also a happy and hopeful glow, happy in the secure knowledge that the next summer would find all young and living things stronger, wiser, and somehow better. These were our autumn thoughts of tomorrow. But, like the universe, thought is always in a state of flux, and our visions of tomorrow change as we grow. What we must learn is that we cannot simply stand and watch the world go past, any more than we hide our heads in the sand and hope it will go away. It must be faced. It is still a beautiful world: The sun shines, the green wheat grows, water is still cool and wet, friends still smile, fat kittens still roll in the grass, and life goes on. Reality is a stream; we cannot plunge twice in the same place. Because everything flows, we must savor the minute at the minute, growing ahead toward tomorrow.

Debbie Carr

Who is L. T. M.?" If this ever be asked all one has to answer is, "Why, he's the respected man at Alamo." In his distinguished manner he acts as principal of the school and does a fine job. For, being a man of few words, Monsignor Leroy Matthiesen proves to be the best man by speaking loudly with his actions. Msgr. Matt commands respect in him. In him is everything we want Alamo to be because he is Alamo Incarnate. These are the reasons the 1968-1969 Round-Up has found for dedicating its appreciation to this man.

Excitement and exhaustion, the car bash, the pep rally, the skits, and the bonfire were mere introductions to the tension soon to prevail at the homecoming game against the Nazareth-Swifts. An ease of tension was brought about by the sure victory over the Swifts the first half of the game. Half-time climaxed the anticipated arrival of Queen Mary Sue Brandt and her Court. After the coronation the Mustangs proceeded to the final victory by a score of 36-0.

MUSTANG TURNS OUT TOP RATED PAPER

A school newspaper provides opportunities for students to learn journalistic techniques and demonstrate their ability to implement this knowledge. The paper serves as a medium of communication, allowing the student body to voice opinions. It is also a source of information. Sharing ideas with one another, the staff gains a knowledge of both school and student interests. Service of both these is their aim.

Under Pat Daly's supervision Pat Moylan and Arthur Cornett, working as reporters, prepare themselves for editorships on future publication staffs.

OFFICERS UNITE

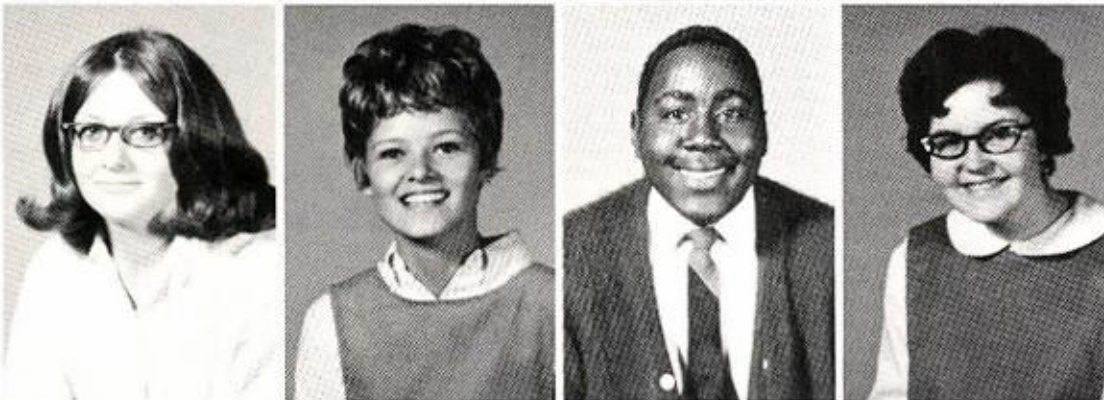

A little wiser, a little more foolish, the Sophomores enter the halls of Alamo. With them they bring past experiences and future expectations, knowing now where to turn but not what to say. There is an aura of knowledge about the Sophomores, yet a good laugh is their foremost joy. They are neither out in front nor way behind, but usually in a steady middle. The Sophomores laugh at themselves and communicate to those around them a gaiety that prevails through all catastrophies.

The Juniors, confident, almost arrogant, walk through the doors of Alamo. They know that they are very close to the top, and they try to make the most of it. With a finger in every pie, the Juniors laugh, cheer, and complain with everyone. They are driven by their own initiative, awed by the prospects of the Prom, numbed by colossal studies, and gladdened by a coming weekend. In their frenzy the Juniors expound their support of Alamo, and acclaim its growth.
